SELECTURE AFRICA

Complete consolidated website, platform and business-development brief

Prepared from: the shared voice note/transcription and the six-page Selecture Africa corporate brochure. The full source brochure is reproduced in the appendix so its services, process diagrams and contact details are preserved.

Document purpose: provide a comprehensive, source-grounded interpretation of the existing organization, proposed digital transformation, initial website scope, future program and application plans, stakeholders, business assumptions, design direction, and decisions required before implementation.

01 / Executive overview

Selecture Africa currently presents itself as an Africa-focused executive search, recruitment and personnel-outsourcing organization. The voice note proposes developing this established model into a digitally enabled African talent platform that combines professional recruitment, workforce management, talent development, training, memberships and relationships with local and diaspora professionals and employers.

The immediate delivery is a distinctive, corporate-grade website at selecture.org. A mobile application is envisioned later, subject to a separate funding and implementation stage. The speaker wants the website ready as soon as feasible to support an intended November training-program launch.

Primary market: organizations and corporate clients seeking talent or workforce solutions. Secondary market: individual African professionals and trainees. The central distinction is that Selecture should not merely find people; it should help prepare, train, assess and connect them to employment opportunities.

02 / Source distinction and evidence labels

Category	Meaning
Brochure-confirmed	Statements and processes explicitly described in the six-page corporate brochure.
Voice-note requested	Ideas, requirements and intentions expressed by the speaker; not necessarily approved as signed scope.
Recommended implementation	Suggested product architecture or functionality that would operationalize the brief, but requires client confirmation.
Unconfirmed opportunity	Potential connections, investments, partners or commitments described by the speaker, not verified as contractual facts.

The brochure is a source describing an existing business; the voice note is a project direction. Where they differ in ambition or specificity, both are retained rather than silently treated as identical.

03 / Existing company profile (brochure-confirmed)

Selecture Africa describes itself as a Lagos-based executive search and recruitment firm with experience placing international professionals, appreciating intercultural workforce needs and delivering recruitment assignments across Africa. Its mission is to become a first choice for executive recruitment clients and candidates, with recognition for recruitment innovation, expertise and service excellence.

The brochure emphasizes global reach and local expertise, sourcing Africans in the diaspora while leveraging local African capability. It stresses tailored client partnerships, individual solutions, candidate technical competence, cultural fit, timely placement and outcome-based relationships.

Existing offering	Detail in source brochure
Executive search and selection	Engaging employers, researching candidates, screening and qualifying high-calibre talent, presenting CVs, interviewing and closing hiring processes.
Personnel outsourcing	Outsourcing and managing local and expatriate personnel on short- or long-term arrangements; onboarding existing client employees and recruiting new personnel.
Team building and volume resourcing	Included in the company positioning; recruitment support for companies planning significant workforce growth.
Background reference checks	Candidate background screening and criminal/reference checks to mitigate fraud, theft, reputational damage and productivity risks.
Document verification	Role-appropriate verification for incoming employees and existing employees changing roles.
Recruitment market sectors	Banking and finance, FMCG, technology, oil and gas, management consulting, legal and the public sector.

04 / Brochure workflows to preserve

Executive search delivery process - brochure page 3

Step	Brochure activity
1	Consult with business principals
2	Research candidates
3	Screen and qualify top talent
4	Present CVs to HR and hiring managers
5	Complete interviews and selection process
6	Close process, contract and hire

The brochure assigns end-to-end oversight to a senior consultant with a dedicated research team and support from senior advisers and subject-matter experts.

Personnel outsourcing delivery process - brochure page 5

Step	Brochure activity
1	Dedicate an account manager
2	Screen and qualify top talents
3	Present CVs to HR and hiring managers
4	Complete the interviews and selection process
5	Conduct background and verification checks
6	Close process and manage payroll

The outsourcing workflow is supported by an account manager, recruitment consultant, dedicated recruitment team, senior advisers and subject-matter experts. These processes should inform any future digital recruitment workflow rather than being lost during the redesign.

05 / New business vision (voice-note requested)

A. Expanded African talent ecosystem

The speaker wants Selecture to operate beyond older staffing-broker models in which companies only meet recruitment intermediaries to source employees. Instead, Selecture should focus on African talent: professionals based across Africa and in the diaspora, their employable skills and personal qualities, professional readiness, and opportunities across industries.

B. Talent training and employability

Selecture is expected to help develop talent, not only discover and place it. People may be trained or prepared for industry opportunities before being introduced to clients. The speaker mentions Afresh, Cbrilliance and potential additional collaborators as organizations that could participate in delivery, with involvement extending to fields such as entertainment and other industries. These partnership roles are still conceptual.

C. Corporate-led commercial model

The main client focus should be organizations and businesses. Individual professionals can also become members, but client/corporate membership is explicitly described as the primary focus. This suggests that the website must communicate commercial services clearly while giving individual professionals a credible route to participation.

06 / Membership and engagement model

Membership	Intended users and outcomes
Corporate / client (primary)	Companies, organizations and other institutional clients registering for recruitment, outsourcing, training/workforce support, submissions, updates and ongoing relationships.

Membership	Intended users and outcomes
Individual (secondary)	African professionals, diaspora professionals, job seekers and prospective trainees registering to engage with programs, information and professional opportunities.

The voice note explicitly mentions sign-up, newsletters, personalized updates, feedback and convenient checking/making of submissions. It also calls for more flexibility than a model that principally depends on booking consultations. It does not define membership fees, vetting criteria, renewal cycles, approval rules or specific dashboard permissions.

07 / Website scope and functional interpretation

The site should be an information-rich yet easy-to-use website with a polished international corporate presence, reliable access to services and room to expand. The following table distinguishes clear requests from recommended implementations.

Module	Function and status
Corporate presence	Company profile, mission, vision, sectors, services, Africa/diaspora reach, programs and contacts. Directly supported by the brochure and voice note.
Corporate registration	Client/organization membership and ways to submit requests. Expressly requested; detailed verification/payment steps TBD.
Individual registration	Individual membership for professionals or trainees. Expressly requested; profile-field schema TBD.
Recruitment service access	Inquiries and submissions for executive search, staffing and outsourcing. Supported by brochure and requested digital flexibility.
Training/program pages	Present program/courses and participation information. Required for intended launch; exact education system TBD.
Newsletters and updates	Members receive newsletters and personalized updates. Expressly requested.
Feedback and submissions	Sign-up and feedback channels; members should easily check and make submissions. Expressly requested, specific records/statuses TBD.
Client and candidate portals	Recommended means to provide persistent profiles, request histories and application status; not fully specified in voice note.
Admin/back office	Recommended for managing membership applications, content, newsletters, service requests, programs and reports; detailed roles not specified.
Recruitment pipeline tracking	Recommended phased digital workflow based on brochure process diagrams; not committed as first-release scope.
Learning-management features	Recommended future option for lessons, progress, certificates and assessment, but the speaker does not demand these in version one.

08 / Proposed four-course training program

The speaker says the planned program will train participants through four major courses. However, the recording does not consistently name all four as separate finalized curricula. The identifiable subjects are:

- Market education: market-related knowledge and commercial awareness.
- Capital understanding: how capital works and how participants understand or access it.
- Supply chains: how products and supply chains work, including access, product sales and distribution-related understanding.
- Fourth course: not clearly named in the recording; obtain a confirmed title, outcomes, duration, delivery model and trainers before publishing.

A training catalog, registration journeys and launch dates can be designed as a near-term part of the website. Video delivery, examinations, certification, payments and learning progress should not be presumed without approval.

09 / Development phases and sequencing

Phase	Target work and dependency
1 - Website first	Prioritize website development immediately: branding, corporate services, program pages, two membership flows, essential forms and communication paths. Website should be up promptly before the anticipated program.
2 - Program activation	Prepare the November program as described in the recording, with the four courses finalized, sign-up enabled and responsible delivery partners defined. No specific November day or year was formally contracted in the recording.
3 - Mobile application later	Plan a dedicated app after the website is operational. The speaker anticipates seeking separate subsequent funding for the mobile app.
4 - Future platform expansion	Potential sophisticated workflows: recruitment pipelines, member dashboards, education delivery, client self-service, analytics, staffing operations and partner integrations, based on validated demand.

Infrastructure fact from the voice note: the speaker reports that the selecture.org domain has been purchased and is managed through Cloudflare. Access permissions, hosting and DNS arrangements still need review.

10 / Brand, visual identity and UX expectations

The speaker feels the existing brochure logo and presentation could be improved, with no major established branding constraints described. A more distinctive, professional, diverse and credible image is sought. The site should be visually strong without making the large amount of content difficult to consume.

The original brochure uses a red/maroon, purple and neutral gray visual identity, map-of-Africa imagery and the tagline Talent Delivered. Those elements are part of the existing source and should be evaluated rather than silently discarded.

Recommended visual direction (not client-approved)

- Editorial, international corporate presentation with strong type, concise service pages and generous whitespace.
- Distinct routes for employers and professionals, keeping corporate membership prominent.

- Accessible, mobile-first navigation, structured content, trust signals and clear form states.
- Consider refined burgundy, deep navy, warm white and muted neutrals as an exploratory palette; final palette requires client signoff.
- Explore a thoughtful identity refresh or logo refinement; secure brand permissions and final approval first.

11 / Stakeholders, investment and regional opportunities

According to the speaker, Selecture is the dream project/company of a diaspora-connected associate who has previously shown interest in a Jos smart-city idea. The speaker states that a proposed smart-city building associated with earlier discussions belongs to that associate or his family. These background statements are context, not verified ownership documentation.

The speaker anticipates diaspora investment and potentially large-scale funding, citing international connections, prospective corporate relationships and possible links to Oracle. He also mentions employment potential across Nigeria's Middle Belt, including Plateau, Benue, Nasarawa and Kaduna, and says a regional workforce program could eventually follow.

Funding caution: possible investment from hundreds of thousands into millions of US dollars, and speculative multibillion-naira scale, are ambitions described in the voice note, not committed capital, signed deals or reliable project budgets. No development payment, contract, technical scope or budget is confirmed by the sources.

12 / Pre-development decisions and discovery checklist

Priority	Decision to confirm
Business structure	One Selecture brand or separate training/platform entity? Which legal entity will contract and own the website?
Website release scope	Exactly which pages, actions and accounts are mandatory for the first launch? What is the deadline?
Membership model	Free or paid? Corporate packages? Approval, renewal, benefits, identity verification and member communications?
Corporate hiring workflow	Can employers post vacancies, inspect candidates or only request recruitment by Selecture staff?
Individual workflow	Professional profiles, CV uploads, applications, screening/consent and account access?
Training program	Confirm all four course titles, dates, trainers, audience, location, delivery method and registration/payment terms.
Data and safeguarding	Personal data collected, privacy notice, consent, access controls, retention and security responsibilities.
Brand and content	Current logo ownership, approved color palette, photographs, claims, updated organization description and content owner.

Priority	Decision to confirm
Technical and hosting	Cloudflare access, chosen stack, database/provider, business email, hosting, backups, analytics and maintenance.
Budget and handover	Approval, milestone schedule, funding for stage one versus future app, hosting expenses, content entry and support obligations.

13 / Recommended delivery outline

Step 1 - Discovery and scope lock. Convert the brochure and speaker's aspirations into a signed sitemap, feature matrix, core user journeys, data model, content responsibilities and acceptance criteria.

Step 2 - Identity and design. Produce initial branding concepts, responsive design system, home/service pages, client-first calls to action, membership journeys and program landing pages for approval.

Step 3 - First-release build. Launch the core public website, essential registration/submission functionality, communication preferences, administration necessary to respond to submissions, and program information.

Step 4 - QA and program readiness. Validate mobile behavior, forms, delivery emails, domain configuration, page speed, accessibility, security and end-to-end test accounts before accepting real participants.

Step 5 - Expansion. Use evidence from corporate and individual uptake to specify and fund later recruitment dashboards, learning systems and the mobile application.

14 / Consolidated product positioning

Suggested positioning statement: Selecture Africa is an Africa-focused talent solutions platform connecting organizations with skilled professionals while creating pathways for professional training, workforce development, recruitment, outsourcing and international opportunity.

Concluding interpretation: This is not merely a brochure website. It is a proposed transformation of an established executive recruitment and workforce service business into an extensible, corporate-led digital talent ecosystem. The first build must be credible and operational without assuming all future modules are funded or approved.
